To meet the objections of both men, Macmillan mentioned that the summit leaders could have informal meetings outside the Security Council sessions. The United States reply, expected to be along the lines of the British note, has not yet been delivered.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

MRS. HUGO BEAVER could have spent her time playing bridge, talking to friends over cocktails and dinner, and sniffing the roses in her large Beach Drive garden.

Instead, she devoted much of her energy to brightening the lives of the blind, wounded veterans, orphans and the handicapped.

A frail little lady who never weighed more than 100 pounds in her life, she collected newspapers and magazines and battled from bed to bed in Veterans' Hospital delivering them in person.

A disabling illness struck her a few years ago and slowed her physically. But up to the time she died Sunday at the age of 91, her mind was still keen.

It was the rich and nimble quality of her intellect that brought such persons as the poet Rabindranath Tagore, the famed actor Sir John Gielgud and the biographer Philip Guedalla to her home as guests.

During much of her life she was known to have kept up a wide correspondence with a string of friends whose names are in her story books.

Fairy Godmother

But ordinary people claimed more of her time than celebrities.

Only two weeks before she died, she had opened her home and gardens to a large group of the handicapped.

"She has been our fairy godmother," said an official of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. She furnished a luncheon room for the CNIB, provided a set of the Bible in Braille and several times answered calls from the society for financial aid.

In memory of her husband, the late Hugo Beaver, bank manager, son of a premier of B.C. and famed rose grower,

Only One Survivor

Ada Georgina Pemberton, and her two sisters and three brothers, were all born in the 20-room Pemberton house, "Gonzales," which stood at the corner of Rockland and St. Charles until it was demolished in 1932.

Only one sister now survives. Mr. Sophie Deane Drummond, a noted painter, now living in an apartment in Oak Bay.

The Pemberton boys and girls rode and walked through the meadows and woods of their father's 1,200-acre estate which included most of southeastern Victoria and much of Oak Bay.

LONDON (AP)—Smokers who can't stop smoking may have been weaned too early, according to a survey reported in Lancet, British medical journal.

Gas-Filled Balloon Tells Chest Progress

Raising of a helium-filled balloon, possibly from the Causeway on Government Street, is planned by the Community Chest to mark the opening of its campaign for $20,000 Sept. 29.

The balloon, about six or 12 feet in diameter, will be floated higher to indicate progress towards the Red Feather goal, Cliff Rutledge, publicity chairman, told the Community Chest board yesterday.

"This is no relation to one of those city balloons," asked director Stuart Keate.

Mr. Rutledge replied that it would not be and that the balloon "would go up and up and not hang limp."

The chest also hopes to recruit a large portion of the city's 3,000 Boy Scouts to wipe car windshields and leave behind a leaflet pushing the Red Feather campaign.

Those donating in other and downtown, raincoats will be given a sticker besides the usual Red Feather this year to save repetitious soliciting.

Residential canvass is Oct. 15 and 16.

Justin Harbord, chest campaign chairman, in an address to a luncheon of the Sefton Club in the James Bay Hotel said: "There is a tendency for people to forget that the Community Chest is not just one more charity, it is 20 charitable agencies."

Mr. Harbord stated that the chest is public business and therefore reserves the right to publish statistical facts as to per capita giving in various classifications, although "we will do all in our power to protect the privacy of personal contributions."

The campaign chairman said:

Act to Raise War Orphan College Aid

OTTAWA (CP)—The government yesterday introduced legislation designed to broaden eligibility and boost some assistance rates in the higher education of children of war dead.

Given strong Commons support from all parties, the amendments to the Children of War Dead Act were given second reading.

One change is to increase the maximum of $25 monthly allowance for children over 21. At 21, children of war dead lose their $10 monthly pension and $50 monthly pension and $50 monthly pension and $50 monthly pension.

Broader eligibility means more children of war dead, including those who served in the armed forces, are now eligible for a higher education course at the father's death, children removed by a specific peace-time military duty, children denied a pension by reason of employment from other sources such as a workmen's compensation board, and children whose fathers directly after discharge came under veterans' affairs department treatment and died during it.

Wives Feel the Same Way!

Remarry Her, Never!

WINNIPEG (CP)—Given another chance, how many men would remarry the spouse they picked the first time? And if not, why not?

The Winnipeg Free Press conducted a survey to find out. It shows that more married women in Winnipeg are dissatisfied with their husbands than vice versa.

CAN'T STAND HIM

The reasons varied from philandering to:

"I just can't stand him."
Asked if they would marry their mates again if they were free, 48 per cent of the women said no. Thirty per cent of the men turned thumbs down on the idea.

REASONS ASKED

Questionnaires printed in the paper asked men and women to give the reasons they would not remarry, their age, number of children, and class of employment. They were not required to fill in their names.

MULTIPLE CAUSES

About 50 per cent of the replies from men gave differences of opinion and unfaithfulness as the reason they would not marry their present mates. Other reasons were bad get acquainted, had housekeeping, drinking and selfishness.

SELFISHNESS FIRST

Chief reasons given by women, in order of importance, were: Selfishness, differences of opinion, budget trouble, bad house habits, drinking, unfaithfulness, children's upbringing and mother-in-law problems.

WOMEN UNHAPPY

Answers from the under and over 30 groups showed little difference in replies from men, but among the women the over 30s were the most unhappy.

The survey indicated professional men were the most happy with their wives while the most contented wives were those under 30 with children who did not work outside the home.

From the husbands who said they wouldn't marry their wives again came these comments:

When Rights Conflict

FROM the remoteness of the prairies The Winnipeg Free Press has assailed Prime Minister Diefenbaker for intervening in the west coast strike of CPR ferries. Editorially the Free Press says that the government drifted into its decision to take over the ferries "under pressure from its members in British Columbia, and against its own better judgment." That may be correct, for after 10 weeks of inaction the government could scarcely be accused of moving in haste. But on the issue of intervention the Winnipeg paper offers this rebuke:

"The strike is painful to the people of Vancouver Island and other west coast spots. But the fact remains that in our society workers have the right to strike. It is not up to any government to decide whether the use people make of that right is wise. For the federal government to take away the right to strike is to use the power of the state against the steamship employees. There is no justification for this."

No justification? Perhaps if the Free Press were a part of the coast community it might feel differently about this. The right to strike is, as the paper says, fundamental to a free and fair economy. But there is something else. There is public necessity. To understand what that means in the case of transportation it is necessary to experience the isolation of an island when its vital connections with the sources of trade are severed. Winnipeg can never be cut off from the rest of Canada. If the railways strike there are always the highways. But an island economically cannot survive for long without ferries. For the right of the seamen to strike, millions of dollars were paid out of the pockets of the citizens of this community.

Rights are hard to assess when one of them comes into conflict with another. Morally if not specifically the federal government was required under the terms of Confederation to uphold the rights of this Island to communication with the rest of Canada. If there is to be any criticism of Mr. Diefenbaker's action it is on the score that he took so long to acknowledge that responsibility.

How else was he to have done so than by ordering the strikers back to work? There was an alternative. The government could—and many believe should—have manned the ferries from the navy, using men of the armed services as strike breakers. It chose instead to operate the ferries with their own crews, under orders, thereby assuring them of the restoration of wages which, while somewhat less than those demanded, at least are a good deal better than strike pay.

By doing this the government of course knowingly laid itself open to the kind of rebuke administered by the Free Press and the labor organizations. It is always easy to criticize from a position of security when drastic measures are taken to meet an emergency somewhere else; but can the Free Press suggest a third course of action which would in every respect have preserved the rights of strikers and the equally fundamental rights of citizens?

May the Deluge Come

TENNYSON talked about the "useful trouble of the rain." It is a trouble without which this earth would surely perish, and British Columbia has presently some cause to realize this truth. What for vacationists and the public generally has been a summer of rare delight is now turning into a nightmare for the forest industry of the province. The long drought has literally set B.C. on fire.

The situation is reported as the worst in provincial history. Countless acres of valuable timber have been destroyed and firefighters are desperately seeking to cope with fresh outbreaks every day. No fewer than 335 fires are raging with varying degrees of intensity, the latest close to home at Butte Lake, where stands of virgin beauty are threatened with destruction. The economic loss both potential and actual is enormous. As a postscript to the Centennial Year celebrations the forest fire situation comes with disturbing reality.

The thousands of firefighters are putting forth superhuman efforts to halt the blazes. Every district has its quota of men working to the point of exhaustion in what often seems a vain endeavor. Every piece of available equipment is being harnessed to the task, and if success seems blunted it is not for want of heroic effort. When this great ordeal is over these men should not be forgotten.

Now if ever is the time for people to wish fervently for rain, no matter its spoiling effect on their own plans, for without a radical change of weather the outlook is bleak and more disastrous than ever. A price has to be paid for every benefit, but the return nature is demanding for the perfect summer it has bestowed is now too much. May the deluge come and welcome, and soon.

An Interesting Test

IF it is adopted, a recommendation to Saanich council from its finance committee that the municipality's bylaw regulating store closing hours be jettisoned should provide an interesting test of the practicability of wide-open shopping. Experience gained from the change in policy would also serve as a useful guide to the adjoining municipalities, which are beset by the same problems as Saanich.

The idea apparently is to repeal the store bylaw in its entirety for a trial period, to see how storekeepers and public react to release from regulation which has always been irksome and fair enforcement of it perplexing. The period should be long enough to give freedom from restriction a thorough trial; 12 months would appear best, enabling results to be studied during all seasons of the year.

Under the complex and in many respects incomprehensible provisions of provincial law no municipality yet has been able to devise a store closing bylaw satisfactory to everyone, or even to a majority. There are so many exemptions that for the bylaws to be enforced properly it would be necessary to station an inspector in every open store to make sure that forbidden goods were not included among the permissible sales.

Perhaps the worst feature of this unworkable attempt at regulation is that the bylaws can be and are being flagrantly broken, because nothing is done about enforcement. Any law that can be disobeyed without fear of prosecution belongs in the discard.

THE United States has finally entered the Baghdad Pact—by the back door. It still has not signed the pact, called formally the Middle Eastern Treaty Organization, which it sponsored.

But it is now committed to co-operate fully with the four active members "for their security and defence."

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles made the commitment at the METO meeting in London, Monday.

He said the United States would not fail to act, "even at great risk," to preserve the independence and integrity of the three Asian members, Turkey, Iran and Pakistan. Great Britain is the fourth member. Iraq, the fifth member, still nominally adheres to the pact. But as a result of the revolt which overthrew King Faisal, Iraq is expected to withdraw at any time.

Dulles is the father of the pact. He formed it as a barrier against Soviet Russian aggression and subversion in the Middle East. Turkey and Iraq were the two original members, by virtue of an alliance signed at Baghdad, the Iraqi capital, on Feb. 24, 1955. Pakistan, Iran and then Britain joined.

From the start, Turkey, Iraq, Iran and Pakistan wanted the United States to become a full member, insisting that otherwise their alliance could not be fully effective.

Dulles refused. He pleaded that United States adherence would antagonize Egypt and other Arab countries and also would cause

Israel to demand a mutual defence treaty with the United States.

But the United States has crept into METO step by step.

First it joined the METO economic committee, then the anti-subversion and military committees.

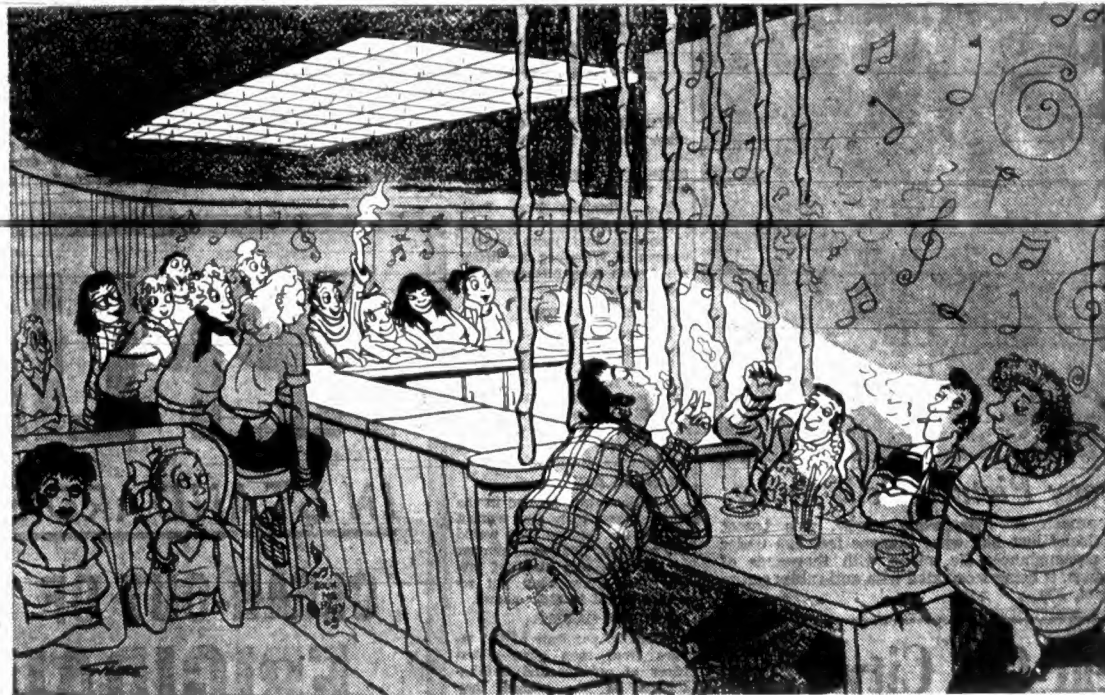

Now Dulles has made the United States a full member in fact if not in form.

He has promised to enter separate treaties with Turkey, Iran and Pakistan backing up his commitment for full co-operation. As part of its co-operation, the United States is to increase its military and economic aid to the three Asian members.

It looked, right after the Iraqi revolt, as if the pact had been wrecked. Iraq was the only archmember. Also it is pretty certain that the rebels captured all the secret documents of METO at its Baghdad headquarters. These documents included military plans and exhaustive evidence on Russian and United Arab Republic subversive activities in the Middle East, along with the names of METO secret agents in Arab countries.

Now, METO members appear to be convinced that their alliance can still be effective. Just how effective the pact will be remains to be seen.

Apparently its chief value will be to combat subversion and indirect aggression by Russia and President Gamal Abdel Nasser's United Arab Republic. Subversion and indirect aggression caused the fall of King Faisal. METO was powerless to help him.

"I approve of Dulles sending his cowboys to the Middle East—gives us a chance to play hard to get."

"... of shoes—and ships—and sailing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

HAVING a bent for maps that enables me to enjoy just looking at them I pulled the atlas from its shelf, opened it idly—and had a life-time notion destroyed.

The Amazon, I had always thought, Brazil's prize watercourse, was the longest river in the world.

My gazetteer says no. It is a fairly new atlas, too. Hammond's as a matter of fact and supposed to be up to the minute. True it is that Whittaker's Almanac gives the Mississippi-Missouri the preference, and so does the Britannica, and that Hammond chops 139 feet off the height of Mount Everest.

But let us stick to the gazetteer before me.

The page I opened, unthinkingly, listed the great rivers of the globe, and the great ship canals. The latter, static waterways at best, can be dismissed in a sentence; the Suez takes pride of place.

The Suez is in Egypt and so, according to Hammond, is the longest river of all—the Nile, tyrant of the fellahs and saviour of his overlords. It is 4,159 miles from source to delta mouth.

Immediately I noted this I was pleased, after the foolish fashion of the man who thinks if once he sees a place that makes him an authority on it. Once, you see, I crossed the Nile, although not like Cleopatra on a dahabiyeh but in a street car.

But four thousand miles! Even to a Canadian used to distances that is a long ribbon of water. If it could be laid straight across Canada it would make a fine canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

And transform this nation into the bargain.

Hammond gives the Amazon the edge over the Missouri-Mississippi, 4,000 miles to 3,892. And then comes a string of intriguing names—Ob-Irtish, Yangtze, Congo, Amur, Hwang, Lena, Makong, Niger, some of which you may recognize.

Ob-Irtish, by the way is the USSR's longest river, 3,200 miles, which must be a disappointment to the Kremlin and something that may yet be rectified, I suppose.

Some rivers have wonderful names. Listen to these sounds: Brahmaputra, Irrawaddy, Zambezi, Rio Grande, Athabaska, Orinoco—how they roll off the tongue! And how names summon images—Ganges, with its teeming banks of bathers; the Volga and its boat song; Madeira, which makes you thirsty to pronounce; Danube, enshrined in a waltz.

For the record: Brahmaputra, 1,680 miles; Zambezi, 1,600 miles; Rio Grande, 1,800 miles; Congo, 2,900 miles; Yangtze, 3,100 miles; Athabaska, 765 miles.

But length is not everything even in a river. That rivulet the Thames, 210 miles, and its sister burn the Clyde, a mere 106 miles, have no place in Hammond's, but how can they be ignored?

Hammond could not, even if he would, leave out the Canadian rivers which thrust themselves into his list. There is the great Mackenzie, which drains the Northwest Territories and empties into the Arctic Ocean 2,511 miles away from its birthplace. There is Mackenzie's other river, British Columbia's Fraser, whose 850 miles is crystallized in the fury of Hell's Gate.

In between, in length, are Quebec's St. Lawrence, 1,900 miles; the prairies' Saskatchewan, 1,205 miles; and Manitoba's Nelson, 1,600 miles of watery little known outside its own province.

On which Canadian note, perhaps, this exploration of river mileage had better close. It can't run any farther anyway.

Keeping in With the Arts Council

By RICHARD L. THOMAS

THE Arts Council of Great Britain, the broad basis of national patronage of the arts similar to the Canada Council, has landed itself in a flurry of conflict wholly unbecoming to the arts but quite normal to anyone who has had anything much to do with artistic ladies and gentlemen whose discipline and logic are sometimes debatable.

For a long time now the general administrator of the Royal Opera House at Covent Garden, who has had a distinguished career as the chief executive of a large retail store, has supported nationalized opera in Britain and used the same arguments as have been used to justify the start of every nationalized industry, but never afterwards. There is the promise of coordination, more efficient service to the public and economies of operation at the administrative level.

The original idea was to make Covent Garden Lord Protector of British opera under its general administration. There was strong opposition from the Sadler's Wells Opera, which until recently was the sole survivor of those rugged opera companies which used to tour the British provinces and provide delight for the customers even though the artistic standards might be open to criticism. The fact remained that a good time was had by all, in front of and behind the footlights.

There was a big blow-up earlier this year when the Arts Council, whose fiduciary powers are derived solely from the power of the purse (theoretically they are a benevolent uncle distributing largesse graciously supplied by the treasury) tried to compel Sadler's Wells and Carl Rosa to get together in the name of economy, and there was open revolt. The director of Sadler's Wells resigned along with his general manager and principal conductor.

That position did not resolve itself until an anonymous supporter offered to put up the equivalent of $10,000 to help save the theatre and the London County Council added another $70,000 in the hope of preserving what Londoners regard as their own opera house. More money has been forthcoming and the result is that Sadler's Wells opera is safe for another year at least and it successfully defied the Arts Council financial dictatorship. The Arts Council then transferred its interests to Carl Rosa, the only opera company in Britain without a permanent home and which spends its time touring.

The result was a major split. Most of the company, its director and conductors and administrative staff resigned. Nearly half the directors resigned and the remaining directors, without a company, decided to carry on. They had no money except the promise of a grant of $100,000 from the Arts Council. There was a temporary lull in hostilities, and then the Arts Council came down on the side of the rebels and it has been decreed that the old company and its old director and administration should tour this autumn under the name — of all things! — "Touring Opera 1958," which seems about as stupid a title as could have been devised by a conference of nitwits. It may be the next step will be to rename Covent Garden as "Static Opera 1959."

That, however, is not all. A temporary board has been created to watch over the interests of "Touring Opera 1958." It includes the general administrator of Covent Garden and the director of Sadler's Wells opera. The chairman is Mr. Lionel Roosey, who was for long associated with Covent Garden, its vice-chairman is Mr. James Lawrie, an Australian journalist who was for years publicity manager of the Royal Festival Hall and who now has with him on the board his former boss Mr. T. E. Bean, general manager of the Royal Festival Hall.

Through revolutionary activity it would seem that the general administrator of Covent Garden has achieved one of his aims. The touring opera has at least become a pie in which Covent Garden, Sadler's Wells and the Royal Festival Hall have their fingers. Regrettably one must presume that singers and musicians who are on the "inner" with the existing organization will be happy and those on the "outer" will have lost their last chance. The Arts Council has come down heavily on the side of virtually unified control and the possibility of independent opera companies seems to have vanished. Logically the Carl Rosa Trust still exists but remains inoperative through lack of funds; it could try to develop an independent company under private and commercial patronage, but that is doubtful.

Artistically the result is that all opera in Britain is now directly influenced and for all practical purposes controlled by one group and financed by the Arts Council. Covent Garden will receive nearly a million dollars. Sadler's Wells Opera will receive nearly $400,000 and "Touring Opera 1958" will receive $100,000 for four months. The Carl Rosa Trust will receive nothing although, as they point out, they were promised $100,000 by the Arts Council.

Far from ending the dispute it is likely that it has only just begun. Repercussions are likely in parliament and the main consideration there will be the authority of the Arts Council to dictate policy. In the last year or two the Arts Council has changed its attitude. Instead of providing money to worthy organizations it has been dictating policy.

As with so many nationalized enterprises the position is rapidly approaching, if indeed it has not arrived, when "keeping in with the Arts Council" is more important than artistic integrity of administrative ability. It may well be a warning to Canada to watch the Canada Council before it is too late.

The Packsack

By GREGORY CLARK

SOME years ago it was commonly said that grandparents spoiled their grandchildren. This was a generally accepted tradition. And grandparents assumed it as one of their rights to spoil their grandchildren. It was, in fact, the basis of the ancient, happy relationship between grandparents and grandchildren.

Like many other traditions, this one has gone phoney in recent years. Today the grandchildren are already spoiled by their parents, and the poor old grandparents are faced with the thankless job of trying to instill a little discipline, law and order into their grandchildren as they did some years back into the parents of their grandchildren. See what I mean?

Up until this generation it was the custom for parents to take a firm hand with their children. Children, until around 1930, were to be seen and not heard. Any evening, anywhere in the Western world, it was commonplace to hear on the soft summer air the sounds of children howling as the result of being spanked. Spanked howling had a different tone from any you hear nowadays. Any howling now is full of fury and frustration. The old, lonesome sound of a small boy being spanked and put to bed has vanished from the earth.

Even grandparents haven't the nerve to revive it. Baffled by the failure of their children to instill the fear of God into their children, poor old frustrated grandparents can only wail, protest, wail, groan, moan, and cry don't, don't, don't. The privilege of spoiling the grandchildren has been stolen from them.

Old age hath yet his honor and his toil.

Death closes all; but something ere the end,

Some work of noble note, may yet be done,

Not unbecoming men that strove with gods.

Moans round with many voices.

Come, my friends,

'Tis not too late to seek a newer world.

B.C. Subsidiary Plans Deal

U.S. May Lift Embargo On Red China Trade

By HARRY YOUNG
(Columnist Business Editor)

The U.S. government is taking a second look at its policy of refusing permission to Canadian subsidiaries of U.S. companies from trading with Red China.

The decision made in Washington earlier this year which forbade Eord of Canada from selling automobiles in Red China created such an uproar in Ottawa and elsewhere, that it has apparently had some effect.

At any rate, the Alaska Pipeline and Cellulose Company, which has the U.S. firm, Rayonier Inc. as its parent, is negotiating a deal to supply Red China with bleached sulphite pulp.

W. E. Breitenbach, vice president of Alaska Pipeline, said yesterday a clearance to trade had been given both by Ottawa and Washington.

His company which owns pulp mills at Port Alice, on Vancouver Island, and Woodliffe, on the mainland, is badly in need of new orders. Woodliffe is closed, down through lack of demand.

Mr. Breitenbach says his company is working on the sale, which has not been completed so far.

Obviously the opening of the Chinese market to the Canadian pulp industry would be a big fillip to the forest industry of B.C.

Why should the U.S. government put its foot down on auto sales, but allow pulp to move to Red China?

It could be a change of policy, or it could be just expediency. Canada's total automobile industry is controlled in the U.S., but there are several Canadian-owned producers who could sell pulp without having to ask Washington their "By your leave."

Victoria Won't Forget

The visit of Princess Margaret to Victoria and other B.C. points in July was the high point of the province's centennial celebration.

On very few occasions has the public responded so warmly to a personality as they have to the Queen's sister.

Much had been heard about her, much written about her. In person she turned out to be as charming and vivacious as reports had said.

Because of the vast public interest in her visit this souvenir album of the photographs taken of her and those who took part in the events has been prepared.

Along with it goes the invitation to her by B.C.'s premier, "Come again, when you can."

An Air of Wistful Gravity

Princess Margaret's Sunday in Victoria was very much like her Sundays at home—she worshipped.

With 1,500 Victorians at Christ Church Cathedral, the tiny Princess uttered the age-old responses from memory and listened with an air of wistful gravity to the ancient lessons, the thoughtful sermon by Dean Brian Whitlow and the harmony of a 50-voice choir.

Inevitably the centre of attraction, she seemed unaware of it, kneeling and praying as devoutly as the humblest member of the congregation.

By this time, of course, Victorians had taken the fairy Princess to their hearts.

Her arrival Saturday had thrilled thousands from the moment her plane touched down at Patricia Bay, along the highway to the city and the Empress Hotel, where a "We want Margaret" chant went on for an hour.

Magnificent Spectacle Under a Peerless Sky

The review of 32 Canadian, British and American ships at Royal Roads by Princess Margaret was a stirring climax to a Royal visit long to be remembered.

It was a magnificent spectacle—under a peerless sky—and the first of its kind ever held in Canada.

Thousands of spectators lined the shoreline to witness the centuries-old ceremony.

Here in the person of the Princess was the link with the Crown that made this Centennial naval review an historic occasion.

Here at Royal Roads was the same sense of history, the same pageantry and drama usually reserved for the famed Spithead Review in Britain.

Princess Margaret reviewed the fleet from a specially constructed plexiglass enclosure aboard HMCS Crescent, accompanied by Rear Admiral H. S. Rayner and Defence Minister George Peckes.

She was a trim vision in yellow, matching the color of her personal standard, hoisted at the Crescent's masthead.

The Crescent steamed slowly along the four lines of ships with the Princess, ever alert and making good use of powerful binoculars, raising her hand in acknowledgement as each ship tendered its hip-hip-hooray.

Besides such well-known Canadian ships as Ontario, Athabaskan, Cayuga, Fraser, Skeena and Margaret, the Princess saw HMS Newcastle, here to share the day with sister ships of the RCN.

There was the mighty aircraft carrier USS Bennington, taking her place as a goodwill gesture of the United States along with USS Estes, and USS Aspro, a submarine.

The assemblage was completed by frigates, mine-sweepers, auxiliary vessels, transports, fisheries and RCMP ships.

At night—after Princess Margaret dined at Royal Roads—the ships were illuminated to make a fairyland of the anchorage.

And then, as a climax, they burst forth with multi-colored fireworks, a fleet review tradition.

Island Tour Was Informal

Nanaimo's Cake Huge Success

A hot, formal, more relaxing atmosphere greeted Princess Margaret on her arrival at Island tour.

The very nature of the West Coast tour, limited to one day, or even in complete tour stiller affairs in the capital.

The very first step, apart from a brief look at the Museum, was an informal, un-scheduled stop at the home of a number of prominent citizens.

At the first stop, the Princess and her party were met by the Mayor and other officials.

About 100 members of a dozen Indian bands from Vancouver to Victoria were present.

A group of Indian children were given by the Princess to represent the traditional spirit of giving by the Native Brotherhood of 100, since chiefs were present.

A Discerning Eye for High Style

But She Shows Independence

Princess Margaret, one of the world's best-dressed women, makes a fashion tour of the city with a discerning eye for high style as it suits her own particular taste and colouring.

At the long table, the Princess, dressed in a white gown, was seen to be very much at ease and in command of the occasion.

Stranded Coho Fingerlings Given New Lease on Life

Federal fisheries department men saved thousands of lives Wednesday—lives of coho fingerlings at Sooke.

A crew rescued the thousands of fingerlings from dry-up pools in the river and transferred them to bigger pools.

The department keeps constant watch to ensure against preventable loss of coho fingerlings through drought. Coho fingerlings stay in small rivers and streams for their first year, but other salmon fingerlings are not endangered by drought. The young chum go to sea soon after hatching, and the young sockeye stay in lakes or large rivers.

Higher Bus Fares' Bid Puzzles Municipalities

Cadets Taught Modern Weapons

Can't Judge If Increase Warranted

B.C. Electric effort to secure higher bus fares will be closely watched, but not necessarily fought by Greater Victoria municipalities as a group.

The Greater Victoria inter-municipal committee, regarding itself as unable to determine whether or not the higher fares sought by the company are justified, decided yesterday on two steps.

WANTS EXPLANATION

It will ask the Public Utilities Commission to give an explanation of its reasons if it grants the company's application and it will be represented at the hearings on the application by the municipal auditors.

WATCHING BRIEF

The auditors, the committee decided, will merely watch the proceedings unless they see fit to recommend as the hearing proceeds, that Greater Victoria contest company claims.

SAMMON SETS TONE

Chairman G. K. Sammon of Ferni said that the tone of the discussion when he said that he would not want to oppose the application just for the sake of opposing it. He was not in a position to know if it was warranted, he said, and thought that was for the rest of the committee.

YEAR NEEDED

Reeve Fred Norris of Oak Bay said it would take a year for a solicitor and an auditor to look into B.C. Electric transit operations thoroughly.

Perhaps, Norris said, the P.U.C. powers were not wide enough for it to do a good job for the public as a watchdog. It had no power to propose means of economizing to the company.

TAKE-OVER HINT

He said that if a proper increase were not allowed, he could foresee the day when the municipalities would be forced to take over the transportation system.

He suggested that the P.U.C. be asked to give a full report on its findings. One thing that stuck in his crop, he said, was the P.U.C. allowing the B.C. Electric to count future income tax as a cost.

SCURRAH AGREES

Mayor Percy Scurrah agreed with the suggestion of Coun Sammon that it would be a good idea to have representatives watching at the hearings.

But he did not think much would be accomplished, he said, because this thing is so complex.

TOP HEAVY?

He wondered he added, how efficient the B.C. Electric operation was if there was too much top-heavy if there was too much overhead if economies couldn't be effected.

Reeve Norris said he did not think the P.U.C. was in a position to assess that situation.

HAMSTRUNG

"I'm afraid there's not much we can do," said Ald. Austin.

He said: "Much as we might like to oppose the application, we can't say we're opposed because we can't check the figures."

He said: "We can't say whether or not they are justified."

Summit Parley Asked On Columbia Issue

Premier Bennett yesterday called for a "summit" conference between Prime Minister John Diefenbaker, President Eisenhower and himself on the Columbia River question.

He said the meeting to settle problems of downstream flows, flood control, navigation and other matters concerning development of the international river should be held at 20 where and a summit possible.

BIG SUBJECT

"This is a subject and a subject of international importance," said the premier.

The international negotiations between Canada and the U.S. over the problems of development of the Columbia river have bogged down once again.

He also expressed his own belief that the problem of development of the Columbia river should be discussed before the opening of the program to be held Aug. 17.

He said that the program to be held Aug. 17, 1958, would be a summit conference between the premier, the prime minister and the president.

The Victoria fire department yesterday celebrated its 100th birthday with a quite magnificent grass and high fires but not a single house consumed.

No official notice was taken of the fact that 100 years ago yesterday was the birth of the present department that has 83 men on staff.

Fire chief James Bennett said no official celebration was held for any official occasion.

Two hand-operated pump machines arrived in Victoria on the ship Oregon, July 28, 1858.

On July 31, two volunteer companies of 60 men each were formed at an organizational meeting in the Hudson's Bay warehouse on Wharf Street.

They had increased to three by 1860, the Union Hook and Ladder, the Tiger and the Deluge—the first three companies of the department.

DUNCAN. North Cowichan residents voted to spend $400,000 next year on road reconstruction. A vote of 100 to 10 was taken down a sewer plan bylaw and two garbage incinerators.

Three bylaws defeated include the carbon, sewage pipe and garbage collection for Union and Maple Bay.

Alberni Fire Threatens Homes

ALBERNI—A fire which started from the Alberni city dump about 3 p.m. yesterday threatened several homes in the rural area outside city limits and burned brush for 1,000 yards along the north bank of Rogers Creek.

Alberni volunteer firemen were joined by 15 B.C. forest service firefighters, and assisted by a tank truck in controlling the blaze.

At 9:30 p.m. firemen said "We think we have it beaten now." A guard was to stay at the scene all night, they said.

Tourist group of the Chamber of Commerce doesn't need to worry about preserving the old England theme in Victoria as long as there are reporters around like Englishman Stanley Blyth.

In a July 13 story in his paper, the Sunday Dispatch on the visit of Princess Margaret to this city, writer Blyth painted a picture of a Victoria quaint enough to make you feel ill.

"Yes sir, the people of this staid little city really let their

He went on to describe the city as a place "where everything stops for tea and croquet is the favorite pastime."

Moving along in a little daze of his own and apparently only opening his eyes at long intervals, the English reporter saw Princess Margaret's car on the way in from Patricia Bay airport passing "farmers and their families some on horseback, others on bicycles and in farm wagons."

For the bemused Englishman the Empress Hotel was still "a very convenient, even though the vines that once draped part of it were water killed in 1955."

In the lounge of the hotel he found "languid hoteliers, retired army officers carrying canes and Panama hats and a smattering of American tourists."

House of Dior Defies Trend Drops Hemline

By GAY PAULEY
The House of Dior, which has been the fashion world's darling since its inception in 1946, has defied the trend of dropping hemlines and has instead raised them. Dior's latest collection, shown in Paris last week, was a triumph for the designer, who has been accused of being out of touch with the times. The collection was a mix of classic and modern styles, with a focus on elegant, feminine lines. Dior's hemlines were raised to mid-calf length, a move that was seen as a bold statement against the prevailing trend of shorter skirts. The collection also featured a variety of fabrics, including silk, tulle, and lace, which were used to create a sense of luxury and refinement. Dior's designs were well-received by the fashion press and the public alike, and it is expected that the brand will continue to be a major force in the fashion world for years to come.

Sidewalks Lined

The sidewalks of the downtown area were lined with people who were waiting for the new collection of Dior. The crowd was estimated to be one of the largest in the history of the fashion show. People were standing on the sidewalks for hours, waiting to get a closer look at the designs. The sidewalks were so crowded that it was difficult to move through them. The show was a great success for Dior, and it was clear that his designs were still very popular. The crowd's enthusiasm was a testament to Dior's ability to create timeless fashion that defies trends.

Dad Lit Last Smoke As Son, 10, Steered

PRINCE GEORGE—A coroner's jury was told that 10-year-old John Yargeau took the wheel to allow his father, John, 29, to light a cigarette moments before their truck turned over in the ditch, killing them both.

Alec Bell and Melvin Yargeau, eight, also passengers, survived the crash. Bell told of the events leading to the crash.

Drugged Divorcee Held for Murder

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI)—A petite divorcee, sought in the slaying earlier of handsome pharmaceutical executive For. Teel, her long-time friend was found in a drugged coma last night in her sleek convertible.

Mrs. Minnie B. (Gonnie) Nicholas, 43, was taken to hospital after a Marion County deputy sheriff found her unconscious on the floor of her blue and white convertible in a secluded area just beyond the city limits. She later was charged with the murder.

Beside her lay two bottles, emptied of barbiturates she took in an apparent suicide attempt, and a .25-calibre pistol, containing one bullet.

Police said they believed that Teel, who was found dead of gunshot wounds in his car, was killed with a gun of the same calibre.

LONG-TIME FRIEND—Mrs. Nicholas, a friend of Teel for 15 years, was reported in serious condition in Indianapolis General Hospital.

An all-points bulletin had been issued for the attractive brown-haired office worker when police learned her description matched that of a woman seen climbing out of Teel's white Cadillac moments after he had been shot three times in the throat, abdomen and left side earlier yesterday.

Witnesses said they saw a late model blue automobile pull alongside Teel's car moments before the shots rang out. He was dead when witnesses from the restaurant arrived at the scene.

Restaurant patrons said they had seen the handsome executive in the Howard Johnson Restaurant earlier.

'59 Cars Losing Glitter

NEW YORK (UPI)—Detroit yesterday promised a new look for the nation's crop of cars.

Smaller cars, more single color tones and additional head lights are among the changes scheduled for next year, according to American Motors.

In what may be the most costly changeover in automotive history, the automakers are expected to spend almost $1,000,000,000 in revamping styles, the magazine said.

NEW SHELLS—Ford, Edsel and Mercury will unveil new body shells, while General Motors cars will share a common new outline.

Less chrome is promised on General Motors' cars, with single tones of blacks and whites expected to be the most popular colors.

Chrysler products will again carry the two body shells introduced in 1957, with exaggerated "flats."

ECONOMY SLANT—Studebaker-Packard will concentrate on a "much shorter, economy-slanted car based on the current body shell."

American Motors, meanwhile, will offer only slight styling refinements to its present design.

Ford plans to issue a four-door hardtop with Thunderbird styling. The model has not been named.
